It cited testimony from Sondland, who testified that the Ukrainians’ interest in launching investigations was delayed until after the Trump administration withheld military aid to Ukraine in late September. Pelosi has been critical of Sondland’s testimony, accusing the ambassador of “distortion” and “deception” over his interactions with President Trump and his personal attorney Rudy Giuliani. Pelosi told “Fox News Sunday” host Chris Wallace that the impeachment inquiry should be able to examine “what was going on in the Trump administration” as well as former national security adviser John Bolton. “When the inquiry goes forward, the American people should see the entire picture. This is not a fair and full picture,” she said. Pelosi has expressed skepticism that the House Intelligence Committee will produce a report by the next meeting of the House on Friday.
