They were really good, even though they still had to be doused in apricot jam or something (I'm not great with the sweetness thing)._____don't drink the kool-aid Spare the bird but eat it! I also made a regular 9" square cake with a buttercream frosting. That's so funny! I was just thinking about what my mom would bake for Thanksgiving! She's the good cook in the family! When my mom first moved out on her own, she brought her own sheet cake! So I did the same. And it was good! But, I just can't take being too specific. I don't want to be the only one who doesn't get it. It's a good taste, but we like to throw in all kinds of new flavors. Not to just get one person happy, but we do like to be inclusive. _____Did you notice the slight feeling of panic at the words "Chicken Basin Street"? Like someone was walking over your grave? Try not to remember. We must never remember. - mumblesIs this about devilberries and nazifruit again? - footface It is funny how traditions change. I was never aware of the Butter Tarts being a traditional Thanksgiving cookie. The little tubes kind of remind me of the ones we got in the 7-11 as a kid, but aren't as good._____Thanks Tim D. for the Memories _m w _ And so it begins. I was just thinking about Thanksgiving and other holidays, and I remembered the earliest Thanksgiving my mom ever made.

jQuery.validate - Is there a way to limit the number of fields that are required? I would like to create a set of fields that have an array of required fields and a user can select more than the allowed amount. Something like: Is there a way to specify that up to, say, 3 of the fields are required? A: Sure, I think you can just use the min and max options to get the required fields to validate to only as many as they should: Then in your code check that the value of the validators min and max match the array length. A: You can set the min and max options to a number of the length of the array. Please see for more information A: Just for completeness sake, you could also combine this with JSLint to reduce the array size to a specific maximum. The following makes an array of 5 fields. If you need less than this number just remove/comment out the unused ones. JSLint does have an option to allow only strings, which is probably what you want. (function($){ $.validator.addMethod("myvalidator", function(value, element, params) { if (element.length == 5) { var isValid = true;

What's New In Media Creation Tool?

With the help of Media Creation Tool, you can create a bootable USB or an ISO image of Windows 11 deployment package. It allows you to create a setup file for Windows 11. Inducible NO synthase (iNOS) is constitutively expressed in synovial tissue and cartilage and is induced in rheumatoid arthritis and other inflammatory conditions. iNOS expression is inhibited by dexamethasone (Dex), possibly via inhibitory effect on NF- κ B binding to the iNOS promoter. However, Dex has been shown to inhibit TNF-induced endothelial cell iNOS expression, suggesting that Dex is not specific for iNOS. The long-term goal of this study is to elucidate the mechanism of Dex suppression of NO synthesis in rheumatoid synovium. The hypotheses to be tested are that Dex inhibits NO synthesis by inhibiting iNOS gene transcription, protein synthesis and iNOS activity in rheumatoid synovium. The specific aims are: (1) To determine the molecular mechanism of Dex suppression of iNOS gene transcription. For this aim, the molecular basis of Dex suppression of iNOS mRNA synthesis and iNOS transcription will be investigated. (2) To determine the molecular mechanism of Dex suppression of iNOS translation. Protein synthesis will be investigated using Pulse-Chase experiments and will be correlated with Dex inhibition of iNOS protein synthesis. (3) To determine the effects of Dex on iNOS enzyme activity in synovial cells. iNOS enzyme activity will be determined in synovial cells treated with Dex. For this aim, we will determine if Dex suppresses iNOS activity by inhibiting iNOS protein degradation and if Dex increases synovial cell iNOS activity. (4) To determine the mechanism by which Dex suppresses NO synthesis in vivo. The possible effect of Dex on iNOS mRNA expression in synovial cells of mice with collagen-induced arthritis will be determined. In summary, these studies are designed to determine the molecular basis for Dex suppression of NO synthesis and to correlate the findings with the clinical effects of Dex. The results of this study will allow us to design an improved treatment for rheumatoid arthritis. How do You Like Being a Weapon? "How do You Like Being a Weapon?" is a song by the English rock band Led Zeppelin, first released as the B-side of the band's 1969 single "The Battle of Evermore". It was later included on the band's 1969 album Led Zeppelin. The song features lyrics penned by vocalist Robert Plant. It was inspired by the 1969 movie The Battle of Evermore, which has been interpreted as an allegorical response to the assassinations of Martin Luther King, Jr. and Robert F. Kennedy. In this interpretation, the song's lyrics tell the story of a black militant (the singer)
