The ultra-realistic physics engine in FIFA 22 delivers smoother gameplay on the pitch, while a new slicker presentation ensures the highly detailed engine never goes awry. Players now feel more in control and more like the athletes they know. New Attacking and Defensive Skill Templates, Player Attributes, Tactical Management Features, New FIFA Ultimate Team Mode and More New Attacking and Defensive Skill Templates Players can now create their own skill templates, customizing their player with personal attributes and in-game settings that can be applied to football players in-game on the pitch. For example, a “Pace” template would speed up the player’s pace of play and be selected when the player is an attacker, and a “Short Pass” template would increase the amount of short passing the player can perform. Additionally, players may now set different difficulty levels for different skill templates to adjust for players with various strengths. These Skill Templates can then be applied to FIFA Ultimate Team mode to create custom teams. “As the most connected football game in history, FIFA combines the best technology and gameplay innovations available to deliver on the promise of the ‘football people’ – millions of fans, players, coaches and clubs who want to experience the game in ways we couldn’t even imagine,” said Olivier Ribet, Global Brand Director, FIFA. “We’ve developed the ultimate soccer game by listening to the community and evolving the game through FIFA Ultimate Team to provide fans with a deeper, more dynamic game.” Players can now create their own Skill Templates and apply them to their

FIFA Ultimate Team In addition to the new Attacking and Defensive Skill Templates, “Matchday” Skill Templates have been developed that reflect the changing demands of live matches. For example, “Team Sprint” Skill Template adds a short sprint option to the traditional one- versus-one football match. This can be used to bring the opposition down and open a passing lane for an attacking midfielder. Personal Attributes and Tactical Management Features Numerous new Player Attributes (PA) will be available on FIFA 22, with added intricacy for performance data creation and interpretation. Players can enhance their on-field skills in team management and coaching by customizing their PA points in-game with the “Personal Statistics” section of the Skill Menu. Players can also earn PA points by unlocking collectible cards in FIFA Ultimate Team mode
