This means we need to remove newlines before it saves to the CSV file. This line replace all newlines in $output and then CSV, and ends with $CSV: $output =~ s/^\s+//g; $output has newlines and need to be removed so that it can be saved as CSV. Example: $output =~ s/^\s+//g; grep -xq "8\s.0") { chomp $csv_line; if ($csv_line =~ /\s+){ e79caf774b

An example of the AFM is disclosed in Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2003-309879. The AFM described in Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2003-309879 includes a cantilever having a base end coupled to a piezoelectric element as a driving section, and a probe tip coupled to a front end of the cantilever. The AFM further includes a scanner formed by a piezoelectric element, a lever that includes a lever body having a base end coupled to the piezoelectric element, and a tip lever that includes the probe tip coupled to a front end of the lever body and is movable in an X direction in parallel to the base end. The AFM further includes a top plate for scanning in X direction and a bottom plate for scanning in Y direction, and the probe tip is moved in X direction and in Y direction while a sample is scanned by the top plate and the bottom plate by the scanner, and then a displacement amount of the probe tip on the sample surface is detected by a displacement detecting section. The AFM further includes a contact detecting section having an elastic body formed of a sample, a bottom plate on which the elastic body is placed, and an elastic body support section for supporting the elastic body. The elastic body support section includes an X axis beam extending in Y direction, and a Y axis beam extending in X
