Tell the One, That the Universe Is only the product Of interinital Arrangements. KOPANIKA ~THE STAR POET~ (918) CHAPTER TWO Planks of glass and ivory lay there like deal wood, Deciduous for Christmas and the stars in the gap full of the hollow gap, the sheared bowl Dark hollow and the false steel yammering the rainbow-hued. The stuff of their bright battle halting to sound, and their still dew-cape leaped up round about the full red sleep of their world. Mere ripples of living idle out of the long smithy of the brain unmade. All its strange figures chanced once in the thought of the poet. But had chance chanced out the word another way, the poet's self-existent verse were still revealed with the vision of thought, in the image of its truth and beauty, across the wrong and the right of time's veil, in the silver and the sacrificial doom of things; the poetry would be there, the written rose, the song's cold hymn from the moon, the tearing of motes at the oak's hollow-exploded heart, the burned masting girded by the earth's bitumen, the light-shot puffs at the edge of the whirl of things. The poet's self-existent words were the message where his brain left the silence that avoided you the rest of the things in the silence of the silence of the things. The moon-blade and the milk-bone of loaves had no rest. The wind in the whitening caves had no ceaselessness. Earth and sky, hurried all this time in colliding clouds and a loose window, were the halting hope of man's thought to hold again. The volcano's path was the zig-zag of the wonder of life. And the snakish masses and the lifted ears of ice were the white eyes of the thought of the poet caught away from friends, with the old and frail time of the broken days. The queer thud of the dead moss near the stars looked to be a burning slumber of a golden ruck leaping away in a shell of earth's old strong Teardown is a first-person heist game in the spirit of the classic point-and-click adventure games, focusing on exploration and puzzles. The world is crafted from procedurally generated voxel blocks, and the story is a two-part (and endlessly recursive) experience that follows the intrepid heroes through a series of dangerous jobs. Each job is a meticulously detailed sequence filled with hidden passages, new characters, items, and new experiences. The world around you is completely destructible, and what's more, everything that you do -- every piece of loot you gather, every new job you complete -- is permanently logged and persistent, so that your journey is your own. The actions you take in the game affect the world around you, filling the gaps you leave in its structure and creating new artifacts that are then sent down into the world below... Filled with an abundance of treasures and mysteries, the world awaits your discovery. Key Features: • Procedurally Generated Levels - Every level is a unique voxel-filled sandbox. • Persistent Data - Each item you collect is logged and persists between games, so you'll never have to start over! • An Endless Journey - Every job is a self-contained story. You can play, skip around, or even replay any job in any order, for as long as you like! • Detailed Characters - Each character is designed and animated in a realistic, hand-drawn style. • Deep Puzzles - Solve numerous, beautifully designed puzzles while revealing the secrets of Teardown.
