The agency, which last week reported, sales tax collected by the county has grown more than $5 million in six months, providing the initial savings after taxes are applied to windfall profits from a major store signing. The county's 2011 tax collections, which when combined with previous years' tax collections, show windfall revenues of $11.9 million -- $6.3 million of which is attributable to Alabama Power. In fact, the $6.3 million figure is the highest amount ever collected by the county before the state's new tax code took effect in 2010. Chattanooga is one of three Tennessee counties that oversees revenue from utility windfalls rather than is solely dependent on state revenue sharing funds. The county collected $6.3 million last year, $2 million in 2010, and is projected to collect $8.2 million in 2011. But it's not an ironclad guarantee that more money will be brought in. A big factor in revenue growth will be the Powerball jackpot winner who bought a home on Riverstone Drive for $1 million in April. The winning ticket was sold in Georgia, but the winner and her family moved to Chattanooga. Overall, Powerball jackpot winners in Tennessee have generated $1.2 million of county taxes. High-throughput barcode-assisted cell seeding to the microplate wells: a new method for automated enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay screening. We report the application of a high-throughput barcode-assisted cell seeding method to the microplate wells, thus replacing manual cell seeding, and demonstrate its potential for use in an automated enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay screening system. The barcode methodology employed is based on the 1D, 2D, and 3D optical printing of seven-digit barcode sequences to the microplate wells, which allows for the accurate positioning of cells to the cell culture microplate wells, followed by the detection of the barcode in the microplate wells by confocal microscopy. We demonstrate that this method is suitable for the accurate deposition

How to write your own program (not script) to monitor syslog for critical errors/problem? I have a server that I want to know about when there are any critical errors or problem. I am doing this by sending the syslog information to an email address. The issue is I have to go and check my email every 30 minutes to see if anything is there. How can I write my own program that does this. In a script, I would just use something like inotifywait. A: You can use a regular expression to receive all messages which are written in a specific format. To do so, you need a listener which reads messages from a file. This file can be created by piping the messages into a file, e.g. with syslog-ng. The syntax of the regular expression is described here. Example: `/^`: includes only messages where the message begins with : The listener uses a regular expression to detect messages that start with the regular expression on the left-hand side, and then applies the regular expression to a message, until a match is found. For example, the following listener reads messages starting with and is triggered when there are matches between the regex on the left-hand side (denoted by the curly braces `{...}`) and the text on the right-hand side. `:regexp {/^`:} `--match /^`: `:file log.txt` `--write-lines` changes to file log.txt Sources: Wikipedia - Listener (software)
