Sachin Tendulkar joins captains' panel for World T20 2017 NEW DELHI: India are reportedly finalising a package to send over 20,000 cricketers to the forthcoming World T20. The players are expected to sign a one-year contract with the BCCI with the option to renew for one more year. India's two-time World T20 champions will have players from at least 15 Indian states and have been looking to get as many names as possible from the domestic circuit. "India are clearly concentrating on domestic cricket but this is the first time that a team can field a much-needed strong senior squad for a long tournament," former Indian team director and BCCI president Anurag Thakur was quoted as saying by the Express newspaper. However, the BCCI needs to pay for the best players which is likely to cost over a billion rupees. Thakur said the BCCI is in talks with the state associations to get the best players for the tournament. The committee would also be able to place the reserve players as and when needed during the tournament. "It is like a plan B. If the state association players are not available, we have this clause where we can call up our reserves, but we will only field them for 20 ODIs or a two-week tournament," said Thakur. The World T20 begins in less than two months and will be held in India. a word for it. I mean, in today's world, things like this are absurd. It's almost as if the media is trying to create a whole new generation of gamers just to hammer them with some sort of moral imperative in hopes that they'll then change the way they play. Like I said, we live in a world where I can buy a "Homeless" PlayStation game, which is then advertised across the media all the time to the point where it's practically unavoidable. It
