She says the murder of an opposition leader suggests a "worrisome attitude by the government towards their society". Phan Ki Phi was shot in September 2008, at the age of 43. Speaking on a conference at UNOCITÉ conference centre in Brussels attended by media, civil society organizations and officials from Western countries, Chisunda said Cambodian society lacked confidence in the way the government was "managing the country". The MPFJ's cooperation with other groups would continue, she said. Chisunda condemned the recent shooting of An Kim in November by a right-wing Cambodian National Rescue Party (CNRP) member from Voenka province in Battambang province. Under the previous government led by Sen Chan "Big Brother" Pheng, threats and attacks were made against opposition members.Kisarazu Gakuin is a coeducational junior high school and a private day school in Kisarazu, Chiba.
